Microscopic studies have demonstrated that the cell walls of eurytomids is cuticular, although, unlike insects, which produce cuticular chitin, eurytomids lack chitin. Eurytomids therefore are similar to fungi. Eurytomid development is characterized by a prolonged period of diapause, particularly when the adults overwinter. Diapause is a survival strategy of eurytomids. The eggs and young adults are in diapause during the winter. This diapause has a life span of up to 18 months.

In this activity, you will investigate various information that governments use to help get things done through the stages of change. You will be asked questions at several stages of the job.
