Re-producing Chineseness in Southeast Asia Chih-yu Shih,2017-10-02

Identity politics can impede Chinese identification in southeast Asia because the migrant population particularly the intellectual aspect of that population have to consider the political effects of their intellectual and social activities on the survival of Chinese communities Similarly these communities have to deal with the necessity of nation building in the aftermath of the Second World War which required integration rather than the exaggeration of differences Consequently restriction on self understanding as well as self representation has become more than apparent in Chinese migrant communities in southeast Asia With this in mind identity politics can inspire self understanding among the migrant communities as intellectuals rediscover how humanism can enable a claim of Chineseness that can be registered differently and creatively in a variety of national conditions Migrant communities generally understand the importance of political accuracy and this being accurate involves subscribing to pragmatism something which is apparent in the scholarship and creative outputs of these communities Humanism and pragmatism together are the epistemological parameters of self representation whereas civilizational and ethnic studies are their methodological parameters This book was originally published as a special issue of Asian Ethnicity
