

TRADITIONAL SCHOOL

SOMEDAY SCHOOL

BOTH

Grades separated by age
If grade contains multiple classes, students are divided into classes by staff members.

Students are expected to learn what they are told to learn.

Staff members create rules. (Some teachers may choose to involve students in creating classroom rules.)

All activities must fit into pre-approved curriculum.

Students may only eat, play, move, get drinks, and use the bathroom when they are given permission or when scheduled.

A lot of focus is put on testing and keeping data.

Success is measured by performance as compared to grade-level peers across the nation.

Adults' jobs are to deliver instruction and discipline.

Teaching practices must conform to requirements by principal, superintendent, etc.

All ages work and play together.

Students decide what activities to participate in.

The only limits to possible activities are safety and whether students and staff can find a way to make it happen.

Adults' role is to support, guide, and learn alongside children.

Adults may offer structured classes to interested children.

Students and staff can propose and vote on rules and other important issues that affect them.

Students are free to eat, play, move, get drinks, and use the bathroom when they feel the need.

No required testing. Students may voluntarily take tests or ask for help in keeping data to assess their own learning.

Students set their own goals and decide when they've met their goals.

All students' learning styles and needs are supported.

Purpose is to educate
children.
