The Black Republic Brandon R. Byrd, 2019-11-08 In The Black Republic Brandon R Byrd explores the ambivalent attitudes that African American leaders in the post Civil War era held toward Haiti the first and only black republic in the Western Hemisphere Following emancipation African American leaders of all kinds politicians journalists ministers writers educators artists and diplomats identified new and urgent connections with Haiti a nation long understood as an example of black self determination They celebrated not only its diplomatic recognition by the United States but also the renewed relevance of the Haitian Revolution While a number of African American leaders defended the sovereignty of a black republic whose fate they saw as intertwined with their own others expressed concern over Haiti s fitness as a model black republic scrutinizing whether the nation truly reflected the civilized progress of the black race Influenced by the imperialist rhetoric of their day many African Americans across the political spectrum espoused a politics of racial uplift taking responsibility for the improvement of Haitian education politics culture and society They considered Haiti an uncertain experiment in black self governance it might succeed and vindicate the capabilities of African Americans demanding their own right to self determination or it might fail and condemn the black diasporic population to second class status for the foreseeable future When the United States military occupied Haiti in 1915 it created a crisis for W E B Du Bois and other black activists and intellectuals who had long grappled with the meaning of Haitian independence The resulting demand for and idea of a liberated Haiti became a cornerstone of the anticapitalist anticolonial and antiracist radical black internationalism that flourished between World War I and World War II Spanning the Reconstruction post Reconstruction and Jim Crow eras The Black Republic recovers a crucial and overlooked chapter of African American internationalism and political thought
