Ross, 2022-09-22 The Oxford Handbook of Early Modern Women's Writing in English, 1540-1700 brings together new work by scholars across the globe from some of the founding figures in early modern women's writing to those early in their careers and defining the field now. It investigates how and where women gained access to education, how they developed their literary voice through varied genres including poetry, drama, and letters, and how women cultivated domestic and technical forms of knowledge from recipes and needlework to medicines and secret codes. Chapters investigate the ways in which women's writing was an integral part of the intellectual culture of the period, engaging with male writers and traditions while also revealing the ways in which women's lives and writings were often distinctly different from women prophetesses to queens, widows, and servants. It explores the intersections of women writing in English with those writing in French, Spanish, Latin, and Greek in Europe and in New England and argues for an archipelagic understanding of women's writing in Scotland, Wales, Ireland, and England.

Finally it reflects on and challenges the methodologies which have developed in and with the field book and manuscript history editing digital analysis premodern critical race studies network theory queer theory and feminist theory The Oxford Handbook of Early Modern Women's Writing in English 1540-1700 captures the most innovative work on early modern women's writing in English at present

From Wives to Widows in Early Modern Paris Janine M. Lanza, 2016-04-22

Looking especially at widows of master craftsmen in early modern Paris this study provides analysis of the social and cultural structures that shaped widows' lives as well as their day to day experiences Janine Lanza examines widows in early modern Paris at every social and economic level beginning with the late sixteenth century when changes in royal law curtailed the movement of property within families up to the time of the French Revolution The glimpses she gives us of widows running businesses debating remarriage and negotiating marriage contracts offer precious insights into the daily lives of women in this period Lanza shows that understanding widows dramatically alters our understanding of gender not only in terms of how it was lived in this period but also how historians can use this idea as a category of analysis Her study also engages the historiographical issue of business and entrepreneurship particularly women's participation in the world of work and explicitly examines the place of the law in the lived experience of the early modern period How did widowed women use their newly acquired legal emancipation How did they handle their emotional loss How did their roles in their families and their communities change How did they remain financially solvent without a man in the house How did they make decisions that had always been made by the men around them These questions all touch upon the experience of widows and on the ways women related to prevalent structures and ideologies in this society Lanza's study of these women the ways they were represented and how they experienced their widowhood challenges many historical assumptions about women and their roles with respect to the law the family and economic activity

Mapping Generations of Traumatic Memory in American Narratives Dana Mihăilescu, Roxana Oltean, Mihaela Precup, 2014-06-12

This volume collects work by several European North American and Australian academics who are interested in examining the performance and transmission of post-traumatic memory in the contemporary United States The contributors depart from the interpretation of trauma as a unique exceptional event that shatters all systems of representation as seen in the writing of early trauma theorists like Cathy Caruth Shoshana Felman and Dominick LaCapra. Rather the chapters in this collection are in conversation with more recent readings of trauma such as Michael Rothberg's Multidirectional Memory 2009, the role of mediation and remediation in the dynamics of cultural memory Astrid Erll 2012, Aleida Assmann 2011, and Stef Craps focus on postcolonial witnessing and its cross cultural dimension 2013. The corpus of post-traumatic narratives under discussion includes fiction, diaries, memoirs, films, visual narratives, and oral testimonies. A complicated dialogue between various and sometimes conflicting narratives is thus generated and examined along four main lines in this volume: trauma in the context of multidirectional memory; the representation of trauma in autobiographical texts; the dynamic of public forms of national commemoration; and the problematic instantiation of 9/11 as a traumatic landmark.
