- 1. The following are the major steps in the process of the audit:
 - 1.1. Planning the audit: This is the first step in the audit process. It involves determining the scope of the audit, the objectives, and the resources required. It also involves identifying the areas of the organization that are most likely to be the source of control weaknesses.
 - 1.2. Understanding the internal control system: This step involves gaining a thorough understanding of the organization's internal control system. This includes understanding the organization's business processes, the control environment, and the specific control procedures.
 - 1.3. Assessing the risk of material misstatement: This step involves assessing the risk that the financial statements are materially misstated. This is done by identifying the areas of the organization that are most likely to be the source of control weaknesses and assessing the likelihood and potential impact of any misstatements.
 - 1.4. Designing and performing audit procedures: This step involves designing and performing audit procedures that are tailored to the specific risks identified in the previous steps. This includes testing the control environment, the control procedures, and the financial statements.
 - 1.5. Evaluating the results of the audit: This step involves evaluating the results of the audit and determining whether the financial statements are fairly presented. This includes identifying any control weaknesses and assessing the impact of any misstatements.
 - 1.6. Reporting the results of the audit: This step involves reporting the results of the audit to the appropriate parties. This includes preparing an audit report that describes the scope of the audit, the objectives, the results, and any control weaknesses identified.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the EuroQol-5D questionnaire. Secondary outcomes included changes in physical fitness, measured using a 6-minute walk test and a 10-minute step test. The results showed that the intervention group had a significant improvement in HRQL and physical fitness compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and HRQL of sedentary, middle-aged women.
