The decline which showmen had noted during the preceding years had not been perceptible to the public who had crowded the London fairs more densely than ever and found as many showmen catering for their entertainment as in earlier years. But while the crowds that gazed at Wombwell's show cloths and the parades of Richardson's theatre and Clarke's circus became more dense every year the showmen found their receipts diminish and their expenses increase. The people had more wants than formerly and their means of supplying them had not at the time of the decadence of the London fairs experienced a corresponding increase. The vast and ever growing population of the metropolis furnished larger crowds but the middle class element had diminished and continued to diminish and the showmen found reduced
