A schematic diagram of a laser resonator. It shows a pump source (orange cylinder) on the left, a gain medium (green cylinder) in the center, and two mirrors (one concave, one convex) on the right. A red line represents the optical path through the components.

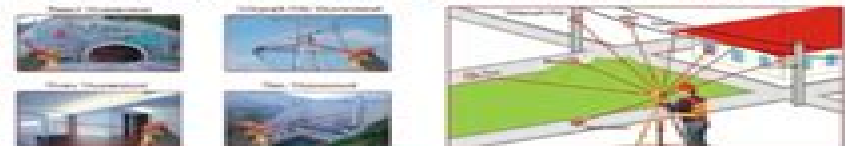

The diagram shows a parallel circuit. A battery is connected to two resistors, $R_1$ and $R_2$, which are connected in parallel. A voltmeter is connected in parallel across both resistors to measure the voltage across the parallel combination.

A diagram of a cell with labels: 'Nucleus', 'Nucleolus', and 'Nuclear envelope'.

The diagram illustrates the optical path of a laser system. It starts with a light source (represented by a green cylinder) emitting a beam that passes through a series of optical components: a lens, a mirror, and another lens. The beam is then directed towards a target (represented by a small square). The diagram also shows the beam's path as it reflects off the mirror and the lens, and the final output beam.

Figure 1 illustrates the experimental design. The process starts with a 'Stimulus' (a word) which leads to a 'Response' (button press) and a 'Reaction time' (time between stimulus and response). The 'Response' is categorized as 'Correct' or 'Incorrect', leading to 'Feedback' and 'Performance'.
