

UNDERSTANDING DIABETES

What Is Diabetes?
 Diabetes is a chronic condition that affects the way your body uses blood sugar. Blood sugar is a source of energy for your cells. Insulin, a hormone made by the pancreas, helps blood sugar get into your cells. In people with diabetes, the pancreas either doesn't make enough insulin or the cells don't respond properly to the insulin that is made. This causes blood sugar levels to rise. High blood sugar can lead to serious complications over time, such as heart disease, kidney disease, and nerve damage.

Type 1 Diabetes
 Type 1 diabetes is an autoimmune disease in which the body's immune system attacks and destroys the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. This results in a complete or near-complete lack of insulin. People with Type 1 diabetes must take insulin every day to survive.

Type 2 Diabetes
 Type 2 diabetes is the most common form of diabetes. It is caused by a combination of factors, including genetics, lifestyle, and obesity. In Type 2 diabetes, the body's cells become resistant to the action of insulin, and the pancreas may not produce enough insulin to overcome this resistance.
