Undergraduate Personal Statement

I clearly remember the first time I saw a diplomat – they were sitting in a dark and tinted car, with a license plate that clearly indicated who they were. Impressed, I asked my parents what I had to do in order to get a car like that. My parents laughed at me, and told me that first I would need to attend college. Since then, I have worked hard at my studies to demonstrate my academic aptitude and potential. I am eager to pursue studies in International Relations, and I know that a degree from Johnson University is an important step towards my career goals. For this reason, I am applying to the International Studies program at Johnson's Harvey School of Social Sciences in the hopes that it will adequately prepare me for opportunities in the political sector.

Throughout high school, I have been very involved with international outreach efforts. I am the president and founder of the International Brigade Club at my school, which aims to connect students from all over the world in efforts to create a future generation in which communication will replace the need for guns. The club enjoyed immense success during my past three years as president, with over fifty members. Many of the students have visited their pen pals, and have come back with some heartwarming stories of how different and yet similar everyone is. I hope to continue my mission of peace and negotiation in the future, and know that a degree from Johnson University will help me achieve that goal.

After my undergraduate studies, I hope to become an ambassador to foreign countries, using the force of words to maintain peace and security for my nation. I believe that war should be used as a last resort, and that much is to be gained through understanding the lives of others. It is my goal to learn about the delicate art of negotiation and mediation, and I am confident that the world-class education provided at Johnson University will give me the skills and experience I need to succeed.
