Sony Ericsson Live User Manual:

, MMS Daniel Ralph, Paul Graham, 2004-04-21 MMS has evolved from the huge popularity of the SMS text service for GSM networks. It is a departure from the transport mechanism used for SMS which is based on the GSM signalling channels to the use of IP to transport messages within the MMS network. To this end MMS has similarities with Internet email and standard IETF protocols. As with any new technology it is difficult to accurately predict the position within the next 5 years although based on previous experience with WAP and SMS it would be fair to say that these protocols will increase in usage over the next 5 years and become legacy for a further 5 years following which users will migrate onto the next wave of messaging. Significant revenue growth and data usage is expected to be driven by consumer usage of MMS. But MMS technology offers more than just a broadening of message content. With MMS it is not only possible to send your multimedia messages from one phone to another but also from phone to email and vice versa. This feature dramatically increases the possibilities of mobile communication both for private and corporate use. Multimedia messaging will reshape the landscape of mobile communication making it more personal, more versatile and more expressive than ever before. MMS is the first book to address how MMS and the use of IP to transport messages will affect existing infrastructure and business models. Covers the fundamental changes to mail and billing systems. Includes future recommendations such as interoperability and evolution. Presents an overview of the MMS technology components. Drawing on the authors' hands-on experience in the implementation of MMS technology, developing billing and delivering services at BT, this innovative book will appeal to engineering managers, network operators, market analysts, business decision makers, content providers and operator organizations.

Pop Brands Nicholas Carah, 2010 Corporations engage young people and musicians in brand building activities. These activities unfold in media-dense social spaces. Social networking sites, the user-generated content of web 2.0, live music events, digital cameras and cell phones are all used in constructing valuable brands. This book addresses the integration of popular music culture, corporate branding and young people's mediated cultural practices. These intersections provide a rich site for examining how young people build brands within spaces and practices that they perceive as meaningful. The book is based on extensive ethnographic empirical research drawing on participant observation, textual analysis and interviews with young people, musicians, marketers and other participants in the cultural industries. Contemporary theories of marketing and branding are brought together with critical and cultural accounts of mediated social life. The book explores the distinctive concerns and debates of these different perspectives and the lively interface between them.
