The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance of the Old Testament George V. Wigram, 1860 Like One of the Family Fiona Mills, 2016-06-22 Kathryn Stockett's 2009 best selling novel The Help and its subsequent 2011 film center on the experiences of African American domestic workers living in Jackson Mississippi. Stockett's sanitized portrayal of life in the Deep South where black women were charged with rearing white children while concurrently barred from sharing toilets and common eating areas with their employers simultaneously enthralled and disturbed readers and viewers alike. Notably it is not the domestics themselves who render their tales but rather Eugenia Phelan a white twenty something Mississippian with whom they hesitantly collaborate who ultimately voices their stories of life during the harrowing early days of the Civil Rights movement in the Deep South. Essentially these stories are articulated through the voice of a white woman a fact that becomes even more complex when one acknowledges that this fictional tale of the inner life of black maids working in Jackson Mississippi one of the most notorious states in regards to racial atrocities suffered during the mid twentieth century is rendered through the words of a white southern writer. Despite the book's positive public reception its sentimental portrait of the lives of African American domestic workers is troubling due to its heavy handed use of dialect and feel good message about the admirable interventions of a white protagonist intent on alleviating some suffering while glossing over the vicious attacks on African Americans during the Civil Rights era. The issue of visibility invisibility is central in this text. At its most basic level the text itself has lacked traditional critical visibility as currently there has been a dearth of academic books focusing on this specific novel although the novel and subsequent film received much attention in national newspapers and magazines as well as significant critical debate in a wide variety of online venues. This collection considers why such sterilized versions of America's complex racial history resonate so deeply in our contemporary timeframe. Essay topics range from examinations of the laboring black female body to the impact of domestic work on families both black and white to explorations of the connections between rhetoric writing and race. Also included are several comparative pieces that draw connections between Stockett's work and that of 1940s cartoonist Jackie Ormes as well as filmic comparisons to Imitation of Life 1934 and 1959 and Black Girl 1966 by Senegalese filmmaker Ousmane Sembène. With a Preface by Trudier Harris and the inclusion of several essays previously published in Southern Quarterly and Southern Cultures this volume represents the first text dedicated solely to Stockett's wildly popular novel and its subsequent film adaptation.
