African pasts Tim Woods, 2018-09-30 African pasts examines African literatures in English since the end of colonialism investigating how they represent African history through the twin matrices of memory and trauma. Inextricably tied up with the historical conditions of Africa's colonisation, charting the emergence of its independence and scrutinising Africa's contemporary neo-colonial and postcolonial states as a legacy of the colonial past, African literatures are continually preoccupied with exploring modes of representation to work through their different traumatic colonial pasts. Among other issues, this book deals with literature in the era of apartheid, the post-apartheid aftermath, metafictional experiments in African fiction, gender representation in reaction to the trauma of colonialism and imprisonment narratives. African pasts covers a wide range of African literatures and a cross section of genres: fiction, poetry, prison narratives, postcolonial theory, and embraces such well-known writers as Soyinka, Coetzee, Ngugi, and Achebe, and more recent writers such as Nuruddin Farah, Tsitsi Dangaremba, Achmat Dangor, Etienne van Heerden, Zakes Mda, Gillian Slovo, and Calixthe Beyala.

It's All in the Delivery Victoria Sturtevant, 2024 Depictions of pregnancy on screen have varied wildly over the years, from Blondie's modest lack of a baby bump immediately before labor to JLo passing out into a friend's birthing pool while a placenta drifts by. Sturtevant examines the range between the various extremes in looking at the comic history of pregnancy in film and television. She argues that comedy provides an ideal framework to deal with the complexity and often hypocrisy of social attitudes toward the female body, which is often held up as saintly or familial with the wonderful blessing of bearing children, or alternately as profane or grotesque with the consequences of sex followed by the physical messiness of pregnancy and childbirth. She links the evolution of attitudes toward pregnancy in the US with representational strategies that transformed social discomforts into comedy. Comedy has provided the generic context for some of the most groundbreaking moments in pregnant representation in the United States, from the outrageous sextuplets of 1944's screwball comedy Miracle of Morgan's Creek to Lucille Ball's real-life pregnancy on I Love Lucy, Maude's abortion, Murphy Brown's controversial single motherhood, Arnold Schwarzenegger's medically improbable pregnancy in Junior, the use of abortion as a romantic comedy plot in Obvious Child, and the use of a stand-up comic's own pregnancy as a performance prop in Ali Wong's Baby Cobra routine. In each case, these breakthroughs were enabled by the strengths of comedy, which sanctions the violation of earlier, more restrictive norms of pregnant representation. Sturtevant examines how the history of pregnancy on screen provides a fascinating lens to understand how reproductive biology has defined women's roles across the American 20th century and into the present, beginning with studio-era prohibitions on using the word pregnant or showing a visible baby bump through the baby boom era's fetishization of sentimental pregnancy. She then explores the sexual revolution and the birth control pill, ushering in a new interest in non-marital pregnancy in the 1960s and 70s, as well as the emphasis on biological clocks and infertility in the 1980s and 90s. She concludes with an examination of the millennial move toward more medically and socially candid representations of pregnancy Throughout the book she also examines the overwhelming whiteness of most of this history and the additional barriers and stigmas against non white reproduction that have led to its shocking underrepresentation in popular media

Afsaneh, A Novel from Iran Moniru Ravanipur,2013-11-14 The truth always loses itself among memories The truth can be lost as though it never existed Not on the ground or anywhere else The difference between a historical event and an insignificant happening in the life of an individual is that the historical event has witnesses who can differentiate the truth from the fiction One evening thirty year old Afsaneh Sarboland dressed only in a thin orange dress flees her husband and home and attempts to create a new life In the story Afsaneh a single writer struggles to carve a space for herself in the chaotic society that has been ravaged by the scars of war Childhood tragedies the devastations of war and an abusive husband have combined to drive her to madness Tainted by the shame of being alone in that night that she cannot remember she begins to unravel mixing the present with memories of the past Afsaneh is based on the author s life as a nurse on the graveyard shift in the early eighties and her experiences on the front during the Iran Iraq war Magical realism and the bitter realities of contemporary Iran are intertwined Ravanipur pushes the boundaries of temporal space disrupting the notion of traditional textual layouts
