

DISCOURSE COMMUNITY

A discourse community is a community of people who share basic goals or interests and ways of communicating about them.

DEFINITION

James Porter (1992) defined a discourse community as: "...a local and temporary constraining system, defined by a body of texts (or more generally, practices) that are unified by a common focus. A discourse community is a textual system with stated and unstated conventions, a vital history, mechanisms for wielding power, institutional hierarchies, vested interests, and so on."

CHARACTERISTICS

1. A broadly agreed upon set of common public goals.
2. Mechanisms of communication among the members.
3. The use of participatory mechanisms for providing information and feedback.
4. The use of one or more genres in communication.
5. Acquired specific lexis.
6. Members with a suitable degree of relevant content and expertise.

Write Discourse Community Essay:

Landmark Essays on ESL Writing Tony Silva, Paul Kei Matsuda, 2013-10-31 In recent years the number of nonnative speakers of English in colleges and universities in North America has increased dramatically. As a result more and more writing teachers have found themselves working with these English as a Second Language (ESL) students in writing classes that are designed primarily with monolingual native English speaking students in mind. Since the majority of institutions require these students to enroll in writing courses at all levels it is becoming increasingly important for all writing teachers to be aware of the presence and special linguistic and cultural needs of ESL writers. This increase in the ESL population has over the last 40 years been paralleled by a similar growth in research on ESL writing and writing instruction research that writing teachers need to be familiar with in order to work effectively with ESL writers in writing classrooms of all levels and types. Until recently however this body of knowledge has not been very accessible to writing teachers and researchers who do not specialize in second language research and instruction. This volume is an attempt to remedy this problem by providing a sense of how ESL writing scholarship has evolved over the last four decades. It brings together 15 articles that address various issues in second language writing in general and ESL writing in particular. In selecting articles for inclusion the editors tried to take a principled approach. The articles included in this volume have been chosen from a large database of publications in second language writing. The editors looked for works that mirrored the state of the art when they were published and made a conscious effort to represent a wide variety of perspectives, contributions, and issues in the field. To provide a sense of the evolution of the field this collection is arranged in chronological order. College Writing and Beyond Anne Beaufort, 2008-02-06 Composition research consistently demonstrates that the social context of writing determines the majority of conventions any writer must observe. Still most universities organize the required first year composition course as if there were an intuitive set of general writing skills usable across academic and work world settings. In College Writing and Beyond: A New Framework for University Writing Instruction Anne Beaufort reports on a longitudinal study comparing one student's experience in FYC in history in engineering and in his post college writing. Her data illuminate the struggle of college students to transfer what they learn about general writing from one context to another. Her findings suggest ultimately not that we must abolish FYC but that we must go beyond even genre theory in reconceiving it. Accordingly Beaufort would argue that the FYC course should abandon its hope to teach a sort of general academic discourse and instead should systematically teach strategies of responding to contextual elements that impinge on the writing situation. Her data urge attention to issues of learning transfer and to developmentally sound linkages in writing instruction within and across disciplines. Beaufort advocates special attention to discourse community theory for its power to help students perceive and understand the context of writing. Landmark Essays on Writing Across the Curriculum Charles Bazerman, David R. Russell, 2020-11-25 Rhetoric as a general teaching while preaching locality of action and guidelines for handling that locality has tended from the beginning to serve as a universality. It has offered a generalized techne with only limited categories appropriate for all discursive situations at least for those that were not excluded from the realm of rhetoric. Nonetheless from its beginnings rhetoric limited its interests to certain activity fields such as law, government, religion, and most important, the educators of leaders in these activity fields. This collection presents landmarks showing where the Writing Across the Curriculum (WAC) and Writing in the Disciplines (WID) movements have gone. They have opened up a number of prospects that were impossible to see when rhetoric and composition confined their gaze to relatively few discursive activities. This suggests that the rhetorical landscape is becoming more complex and interesting as well as more responsive to life in the complex, differentiated societies that have emerged in the last few centuries. This volume will reveal to scholars and researchers a range of possibilities for the study of disciplinary discourse and its teaching and suggest to them new prospects for the future and for the better.

Theorizing Composition Mary Kennedy, 1998-06-25. The last 25 years have witnessed extraordinary growth in the academic specialization variously described as composition studies or rhetoric and composition. What was noticeable about the field in its infancy was a preoccupation with practice, a lack of emphasis on theory, and an exclusive reliance on the writing process. As its disciplinary status has grown, the field has become far more theoretical. Composition studies has expanded its focus, reconceptualized the writing process, and embraced a wide range of critical perspectives. The result of this change is that terms such as poststructuralism, social construction, gender, and genre, which were largely unknown in 1965, now dominate discussion. This reference book is a guide to the multiplicity of theories that have emerged to form the disciplinary foundation of composition studies. The volume consists of 66 entries, each of which is written by an expert contributor and focuses on a particular theory or group of theories. While the entries show how various individuals have contributed to theoretical movements, very few concentrate on the work of a single theorist. Each entry first provides a critical summary of a particular theory or group of theories, including key elements, basic concepts, and claims, and information about seminal or particularly influential works. It then reviews the theory's critical reception in composition studies and discusses its significance in the field. The bibliography at the end of each entry lists primary texts and major scholarship related to the theory and provides additional suggestions for further reading. The volume closes with a selected bibliography of important works.

Writing the Community Linda Adler-Kassner, Robert Crooks, Ann Watters, 2023-07-03. The first volume in AAHE and Campus Compact's series on service learning in the disciplines, the book discusses the microrevolution in college-level composition through service learning. The essays in this volume show why service learning and communication are a natural pairing and give a background on the relationship between service learning and communication, with maps to suggest where it should go in the future.

Landmark Essays on Rhetorical Genre Studies Carolyn R. Miller, Amy J. Devitt, 2024-11-01. Landmark Essays on Rhetorical Genre Studies gathers major works that have contributed to the recent rhetorical reconceptualization of genre. A lively and complex field developed over the past 30 years.

Rhetorical Genre Studies is central to many current research and teaching agendas This collection which is organized both thematically and chronologically explores genre research across a range of disciplinary interests but with a specific focus on rhetoric and composition With introductions by the co editors to frame and extend each section this volume helps readers understand and contextualize both the foundations of the field and the central themes and insights that have emerged It will be of particular interest to students and scholars working on topics related to composition rhetoric professional and technical writing and applied linguistics

Writing and Identity Roz Ivani?,1998-03-15 Writing is not just about conveying content but also about the representation of self One of the reasons people find writing difficult is that they do not feel comfortable with the me they are portraying in their writing Academic writing in particular often poses a conflict of identity for students in higher education because the self which is inscribed in academic discourse feels alien to them The main claim of this book is that writing is an act of identity in which people align themselves with socio culturally shaped subject positions and thereby play their part in reproducing or challenging dominant practices and discourses and the values beliefs and interests which they embody The first part of the book reviews recent understandings of social identity of the discursal construction of identity of literacy and identity and of issues of identity in research on academic writing The main part of the book is based on a collaborative research project about writing and identity with mature age students providing a case study of one writer s dilemmas over the presentation of self a discussion of the way in which writers life histories shape their presentation of self in writing an interview based study of issues of ownership and of accommodation and resistance to conventions for the presentation of self linguistic analysis of the ways in which multiple often contradictory interests values beliefs and practices are inscribed in discourse conventions which set up a range of possibilities for self hood for writers The book ends with implications of the study for research on writing and identity and for the learning and teaching of academic writing The book will be of interest to students and researchers in the fields of social identity literacy discourse analysis rhetoric and composition studies and to all those concerned to understand what is involved in academic writing in order to provide wider access to higher education
