

I) Transfer flow for engaging the four-wheel drive front shaft

Central drive traction

The movement is transmitted by the gear (26) and the coupling carried out by the fork and the sleeve (27).

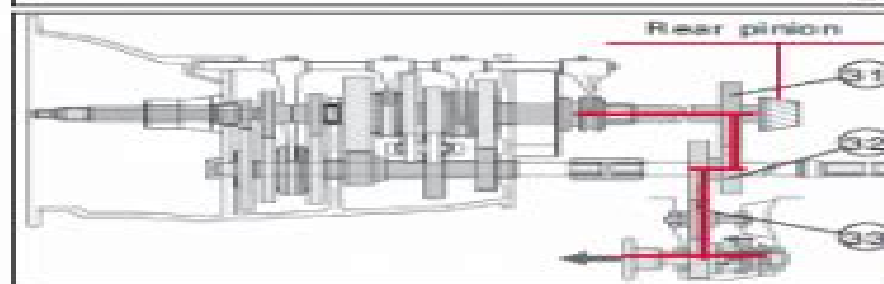

These components are lodged in the transfer box (spacer), which is mounted between the gearbox and the rear shaft central housing.

Inside the transfer box, there is the intermediate gear train (29), which is responsible for transmitting the movement to the drop gearbox (30), mounted on the transfer box.

Side drive

The movement is transmitted by a gear (31) mounted on the rear shaft pinion. Right after, the movement is transferred, by the gear train (32), to the intermediate gear (33), which is part of the side drive box.

J) Creeper (Optional)

- ☛ If the Creeper selector lever (B) is in Fast "F" (forward), the speed remains the same.
- ☛ If the shift selector lever (A) is in Slow "S" and the Creeper lever (B) is also in Slow (rearward), the Super-reduced speed is obtained.
- ☛ If the Super-reduced speed is not necessary, the Creeper lever must be in Fast "F".
