Winston, 2009-08-04 Panning for Gold is the remarkable and memorable journey of a youngman who has to come to terms with the adversities he had to struggle against as a child and teenager growing up in foster care from the ages of 6 19 years His mother was a paranoid schizophrenic and he never knew his real father All he had was his two younger brothers and his belief in a higher power to help him endure and overcome the pain As his faith was constantly tested he observed how many people feel that the past should be left behind but his past constantly resurfaces as he bounces from home to home and shelter to shelter The young child was gifted in the literary arts but never accepted his talent because he was always too busy trying to fit in with his surroundings to maintain a placement It is a heartwrenching yet funny tale of what many children today have to endure while coming from a broken home but gives insight to what you can attain and achieve if only you stop to sift through the dirt of life and learn to believe in yourself for who knows what you may find when you finally begin to look within

The idea for this book came in the form of a dream that spurred the author into writing Max a spellbinding tale of a man finding a 7' tall black metal statue and a small black box made of the same unique material in a debris mound in a strangely formed gulch in Colorado. Later he discovers that the little black box was the power source that brought the statue to life. This is the story of David and Max's fearful first encounter and their eventual bond of friendship that leads the two to journey through the dark side of our Government's power and determination to capture the alien and David with the goal to discover and take possession of the two alien crafts hidden somewhere in a chamber in the Colorado mountains. This is book one of two books planned in this series. Warning: once you start reading this book you will not want to put it down. Colour, 1915
