

Writing Summaries

A note: CUSSW instructors vary greatly in what they ask of students when writing summaries; therefore, what follows should be read as a guide, not as a directive.

The goal of writing a summary of an article, a chapter, or a book is to offer as accurately as possible the full sense of the original, but in a more condensed form. A summary restates the author's main point, purpose, intent, and supporting details in your own words.

The process of summarizing can help you to better grasp the original, and your summary will show the reader that you understand it as well. In addition, the knowledge gained will enhance your ability to analyze and critique the original.

- First, identify the type of article you are reading, as it will determine the approach you will want to take in writing your summary. Most journal articles are structured and written according to one of five types:
 1. Empirical studies are reports of original research containing four distinct sections. You will want to locate and write about the purpose of the study or the problem under investigation; the methods used; the results; and the conclusion the author makes from the results, including implications for the field of practice.
 2. Review articles evaluate studies already published. You will need to describe the question or problem being addressed; summarize the literature review, which is a major part of a review article; and describe the author's suggestions for the next steps in dealing with the problem.
 3. Theoretical articles examine research literature to assess and or advance current theory. The summarizing process is similar to that for a review article.
 4. Methodological studies focus on approaches and analyses of new or existing methods of conducting research in comparison to alternative methods. Your approach is also similar to 2 and 3 above: describe the approach, its applicability, supporting details, conclusions, and implications for the approach or analysis under study.
