Readings in Writing Courses Richard C. Raymond,2010-12-01 As the title suggests this six chapter book responds to a question which in Western culture goes back to Plato Aristotle Cicero and Quintilian namely What should rhetoric teachers ask their students to read Primarily historical the first two chapters trace conflicting answers to the question above focusing on two constructive results of the debate the re invention of rhetoric and writing as a discipline a coherent and growing body of knowledge and as a result the emergence of independent departments of writing free from departments of English free therefore to develop their own curriculum and to manage their own budgets Additionally the second chapter examines two destructive consequences of this debate the ban of literature from writing courses where students might profitably study both and as a result the often painful departmental splits which not only separate former colleagues but also cramp the pedagogy of those trained to teach both writing and literature More than a survey of key publications this chapter encourages readers to honor the discipline of rhetoric but to make a place for literature on their composition syllabi The next four chapters provide pedagogical support for these chief claims that literature can and should be taught in writing courses and that such readings need not distract students from the primary text their own writing On the contrary these readings motivate serious writing when students feel invited into a conversation on issues that touch their lives These pedagogical chapters then move entering professionals from the theoretical debate to the application of theory therefore the book would serve well professors of courses in composition theory particularly those who enjoy teaching the conflicts and preparing their graduate students to design assignments and courses that apply theories of learning reading and composing

Writing for film doesn't have to feel like an engineered exercise in story building. Rather, it can be a story freeing adventure, one that retains all the magic, wonder, and awe of movies and makes you believe. Learn to craft engaging, compelling, entertaining stories for the screen spontaneously and without struggle, whether you're a seasoned screenwriter or just starting out. Be the Storyteller You Are. Go Organic. Write Your Screenplay the Natural Way. What I share here speaks to the core of what I believe, not only about screenwriting but about writing, and that's that creativity is an organic process that relies more on discernment than rules, more on intuition than outlines, more on passion than structure. It's a free flowing in the moment experience that urges us to turn our backs on cookie cutter formulas and paint by numbers canvasses. It's a realm where Story is king and Muse is both chancellor and court jester. It's a journey where we sit wide eyed in a darkened theater and watch awestruck as our screenplay reveals itself to us on the flickering screen.
