Joseph Conrad and Virginia Woolf who used the word impression to describe what they wanted their fiction to present Matz redefines literary Impressionism focusing on the way that impressions destroy standard perceptual distinctions between thinking and sensing believing and suspecting He argues that these writers favoured not immediate subjective sense but rather a mode that would mediate perceptual distinctions Just as impressions fall somewhere between thought and sense Impressionist fiction occupies the middle ground between opposite ways of engaging with the world Matz also argues that the resulting confusion becomes a basic plot feature of modernist fiction This wide ranging 2001 study addresses the problems of perception and representation that occupied writers in the early decades of the twentieth century
