How do our Bodies Move?

The body can perform many actions to move in order to survive and respond to the outside. Different systems in the body work together to perform these actions.

For example, when a person walks, many different parts of the body work together. The brain sends signals to the muscles to move. The heart pumps blood to the muscles. The lungs take in oxygen and release carbon dioxide. The bones support the body. The joints connect the bones and allow them to move.

Understanding how the body works can help us stay healthy and active. We can learn how to move better and avoid injuries. We can also learn how to help people who have trouble moving.
