

Module 5, Week 1, Lesson 1		Reading and vocabulary T214-T215
Text Features
Focus Question: How can we practice identifying and using text features when reading an informational text?		Lesson objectives: Today we will: • Recognize characteristics of informational text. • Identify and use text and graphic features to locate and gain information. • Discuss the graphic and text features in an informational text. • Share information and ideas in cooperative learning interactions.
Standards: Addressing Priority Learning Standards ELA Progressions • SR5: Develop and answer questions about key ideas and details in a text. • SR3: Describe characters, settings, and major events in a story, or pieces of information in a text. • SR6: Describe how illustrations and details support the point of view or purpose of the text. • SR7: Use illustrations and details in literary and informational texts to discuss story elements and/or topics. • LSL3a: Follow agreed-upon rules for discussions and participate by actively listening, taking turns, and staying on topic. • LSL3c: Ask questions to clear up any confusion about topics and texts under discussion. • LSL3d: Consider individual differences when communicating with others.
Connect and teach	Vocabulary: • diagram an illustration or photograph that is labeled to show how something looks or works • label words on a diagram that name the parts of a picture	• Remind children that authors of informational texts often use different kinds of text and graphic features to help explain an idea or to help readers locate information about the topic. • Project or display Anchor Chart 26: Text Features. • Explain that text and graphic features have different purposes. Authors choose the types that will best help readers understand the information they want to share. • Explain that special text, like different color text and different size text, is one text feature that authors can use to call attention to certain information. • Next, explain that diagrams are one kind of graphic feature. Diagrams are pictures that help explain the topic of the text. They can show what something looks like or how it works. Labels on a diagram name the parts of the picture. • Point out that it is often easier to show something than describe it using just words, so good readers must pay attention to the information from both the text and the graphic features. Sometimes the information from the two go
