Writing Genres Year 3:

Landmark Essays on Rhetorical Genre Studies Carolyn R. Miller, Amy J. Devitt, 2024-11-01 Landmark Essays on Rhetorical Genre Studies gathers major works that have contributed to the recent rhetorical reconceptualization of genre. A lively and complex field developed over the past 30 years, Rhetorical Genre Studies is central to many current research and teaching agendas. This collection, which is organized both thematically and chronologically, explores genre research across a range of disciplinary interests but with a specific focus on rhetoric and composition. With introductions by the co-editors to frame and extend each section, this volume helps readers understand and contextualize both the foundations of the field and the central themes and insights that have emerged. It will be of particular interest to students and scholars working on topics related to composition, rhetoric, professional and technical writing, and applied linguistics.

Navigator Dimensions Year 3:

Teaching Guide Eileen Jones, 2005-05-09

Putting Writing Research into Practice Gary A. Troia, Rebecca K.

Shankland, Anne Heintz, 2010-04-29 What are the most effective methods for teaching writing across grade levels and student populations? What kind of training do teachers need to put research validated methods into practice? This unique volume combines the latest writing research with clear cut recommendations for designing high quality professional development efforts. Prominent authorities describe ways to help teachers succeed by using peer coaching, cross disciplinary collaboration, lesson study, and other professional development models. All aspects of instruction and assessment are addressed, including high stakes writing assessments, applications of technology, motivational issues, writing in different genres and subject areas, and teaching struggling writers.

Writing Assignments Across University Disciplines Roger Graves, 2017-12-07

Writing Assignments Across the University Curriculum as a whole asks and answers these questions: What kinds of documents do students write in a wide range of university degree programs in Canada? How do instructors structure those writing assignments? That is, who is the audience for the assignments? Do students get formative feedback as they develop their documents? Do the patterns we found in a small liberal arts college (Graves, Hyland, and Samuels, 2010) occur in other kinds of universities? We took our cue from an article by Anson and Dannels (2009) who pointed us toward the idea that students experience a curriculum through their degree progress in an academic program. Consequently, we needed to map the writing assignments according to how different departments organized these degree programs. Results that were organized by curricular unit, departments, faculties, or colleges or programs, units were more significant than general statistics because students would progress through these courses to a degree. Several chapters in the book describe how this kind of curricular mapping provided a spark for curricular reform in Engineering Education and an entire small university. The last two chapters report on the instructors' perspective on their assignments: what they were intending to do and why they both resisted and engaged in curricular discussions.
