• Turn off and unplug all components before making connections. If you are connecting a digital cable box, you'll need a special for external antenna that's compatible with your cable box. Contact your cable provider for details.

Making Video Connections

Your TV includes several types of video inputs. Use the inputs that are available on your components that provide the best video performance as described below.

| Connector type |                                             |
|----------------|---------------------------------------------|
|                | HDMI (High-Definition Multimedia Interface) |
|                | Component video                             |
|                | S-Video                                     |
|                | Composite video                             |
|                | RF (Antenna)                                |

Additional Connections

For best video performance, connect your digital video components using either digital optical or digital coaxial video connections. Depending on which components are in your system, you may need to purchase additional connections. For example, if you have a satellite receiver, you'll need to connect the satellite receiver. If you have an A/V receiver, you'll need to connect speakers.

Notes

- The component digital video inputs on the rear panel are for component video only. Other digital video inputs and other connections that include an A/V receiver are also for use. Signals on this type of receiver connection cannot be obtained directly.
- The front panel component inputs are used for video on the side. When connecting the cable to the TV, connect the cable to the front panel side for the HDMI-DVI port.
