Wheat Improvement, Management and Utilization Ruth Wanyera, James Owuoche, 2017-05-24 The Wheat Improvement Management and Utilization book covers some of the most recent research areas that touch on enhancement of wheat productivity. It is obvious that wheat is one of the major staple crops grown globally. This crop has widely been researched on considering that for instance it is afflicted by various abiotic and biotic stresses that limit its growth and productivity. Today's goal of wheat improvement consistently is to develop varieties that are high yielding with good processing and technological qualities well adapted and tolerant to prevailing biotic and abiotic stresses. Therefore this is a valuable reference book on wheat improvement agronomy and end use qualities particularly for those who work in research organizations and higher academic institutions. Moreover it provides an invaluable resource for readers interested in a quick review of trending topics in wheat.

The Status of Student Involvement in University Governance in Kenya M. Mulinge, N. Arasa, 2017-05-05 This book examines the concept of the democratization of governance in universities in Kenya with particular emphasis on students involvement in governance processes and decision making. Data were collected from members of the student community utilizing a structured self administered questionnaire and from purposively selected key informants and focus group discussants drawn from Kenyatta University representing the public sector and the United States International University representing the private sector. The guiding argument for the study was that shared governance one of the principles of good governance is critical in enabling the universities to deliver their visions and the missions effectively. The results revealed that while in principle Kenyan universities have embraced democratic governance in which all stakeholders including students have a role to play in practice they continue to violate the core principles of good governance particularly shared governance. Specifically students who are major stakeholders in university education are largely excluded from significant structures of governance thereby limiting their influence and participation. Although their representation is mainly provided via student self governance organs unions associations and or councils their effectiveness is undermined considerably by the lack of trust and confidence of the student body and the unending manipulation by top university administrators and external political actors. Student active involvement in decision making is mainly confined to lower levels such as the school faculty and departmental programme. The authors call for a paradigm shift in the involvement of students in the governance of universities in ways that discourage the current culture of tokenism and political correctness that characterizes public and private universities in Kenya.

Diagnostic Devices with Microfluidics Francesco Piraino, Šeila Selimović, 2017-06-26 This book provides a current view of the research and commercial landscape of diagnostics devices particularly those that utilize microscale technologies intended for both patient and laboratory use. Common diagnostic devices that are based on microfluidic principles include glucose sensors for diabetic patients and over the counter pregnancy tests. Other diagnostic devices are being developed to quickly test a patient for bacterial and viral infections and other diseases The chapters written by experts from around the world discuss how to fabricate apply and market microfluidic diagnostic chips for lab and at home use Most importantly the book also contains a discussion of topics relevant to the private sector including patient focused market oriented development of diagnostics devices Chapter 9 of this book is freely available as a downloadable Open Access PDF at <http://www.taylorfrancis.com> under a Creative Commons Attribution CC BY 4.0 license

Relational Christianity Wesley M. Pinkham, 2022-06-21. This work begins with a transformative idea: human existence is fundamentally relational. Relational Christianity explores how the nature of the Trinity must define the Church and the Christian spiritual life. Utilizing Scripture, Christian spiritual tradition, and philosophy, Pinkham and Gruenberg paint the picture of a Trinitarian Jesus-centered Christianity led by the Father and explored in interpersonal oneness. In this view, God's intimate unifying love is the theological river that runs through the landscape of biblical revelation and through God's movement in history. This work of Trinitarian practical theology suggests that the relation between Father, Son, and Spirit should shape and guide all Christian interactions with God, with others, and with self. In the paradigm of relational Christianity, the formation of genuine personhood and identity are based upon relational connections: first with the Trinity and second with God's family. The shape of the new covenant community must reflect the Father's nature. Church culture must prioritize relationship in the same way the Trinity does.

Development Estimates for the Year ... Kenya, 2014. The Routledge Handbook of Contemporary Ageing Issues Mala Kapur Shankardass, 2025-09-30. This handbook provides a comprehensive look into the emerging issues confronting ageing societies across the world. Drawing on scholarship from Africa, the Americas, Asia Pacific, and Europe, it explores different dimensions of ageing: gender, health, environment, care, elder abuse, generational relationships, and grief. The volume adopts a gerontological perspective to evaluate ageing-specific policies and places emphasis on guiding research and practice towards achieving a better quality of life for older people across the world. It argues that new developments, because of changing age structures, support ratios, family relationships, and socioeconomic situations, call for innovative practices in terms of health and social care facilities, livelihood opportunities, retirement options, skill development, and educational learning. Lucid and accessible, the handbook will be of interest to those working in gerontology, ageing, health, death studies, social care, public health, policy, human rights, law, sociology, and social policy, gender studies, cultural studies, medical sociology, political sociology, mental health, and social sciences.

Rethinking Our Ecosystems Nixon Ronoh, Charles Rono, 2025-09-30. The International Conference on Climate Change and Ecosystem Restoration (ICCCER) organized by The Restoration Alliance and Moi University addresses and consolidates efforts toward climate change mitigation through landscape restoration. With a special emphasis on the Great Rift Valley's unique and biodiverse landscapes, this conference aims to create a robust platform for dialogue, knowledge exchange, and collaboration between academia, government agencies, civil society organizations, and private sector actors. ICCER focuses on the cross-disciplinary themes of climate change, ecosystem conservation, adaptation, and landscape restoration. Major themes of the 2024 meeting highlight the management of restoration projects, AI, and other emerging technologies, practical aspects of biodiversity, and conservation initiatives, and cross sectoral initiatives that incorporate health agriculture socio economic aspects with climate change adaptation and mitigation and ecosystem restoration

Marker-Assisted Breeding in Legumes for Drought Tolerance Muhammad Azhar Nadeem, Faheem Shehzad Baloch, Filippos Bantis, Sajid Fiaz, Muhammad Aasim, 2025-05-16 This contributed volume highlights cutting edge breeding techniques in legumes specifically targeting drought tolerance It examines the challenges faced and explores future perspectives for achieving sustainable legume production The dual challenges of a rapidly growing global population and climate change impose immense pressure on agricultural systems to meet current and future food demands Climate change significantly threatens agriculture causing substantial yield losses due to biotic and abiotic stresses with drought being one of the most severe environmental factors impacting plant productivity Water which constitutes approximately 80-95% of the fresh biomass of plants is vital for various physiological processes including plant growth development and metabolism Legumes second only to cereals in global food production account for 27% of world primary crop production and fulfill 33% of protein requirements Cultivated across diverse climates and soil types legumes contribute to over 35% of global vegetable oil production However drought remains a major yield limiting factor in grain legumes a challenge expected to intensify in the future Drought adversely affects legumes at all growth stages disrupting germination through malfunctioning enzymes like proteases and amylases nutrient uptake due to reduced water use efficiency growth by inhibiting cell division and leaf expansion and yield formation by restricting photosynthesis Given these challenges the scientific community is focusing on developing drought resistant legume cultivars to ensure future food security This volume consolidates research efforts on advancing drought tolerant legumes using marker assisted breeding techniques This book will serve as a valuable resource for students researchers and breeding professionals engaged in legume breeding for drought tolerance By fostering advancements in sustainable agriculture this volume aims to contribute to global food security and empower stakeholders in addressing climate change induced agricultural challenges Fertilizer Application on Crop Yield Jagadish Timsina, 2019-04-02 Fertilizer application can increase crop yields and improve global food security and thus has the potential to eliminate hunger and poverty. However, excessive amounts of fertilizer application can contribute to groundwater pollution, greenhouse gas emissions, eutrophication, deposition, and disruptions to natural ecosystems and soil acidification over time. Small farmers in many countries think inorganic fertilizers are expensive and degrade soils, and thus policymakers want to promote organic instead of inorganic fertilizers. To develop practical fertilizer recommendations for farmers, yield responses to applied fertilizers from inorganic and organic sources, indigenous nutrient supply from soil, and nutrient use efficiency require consideration. There is a lack of sufficient scientific understanding regarding the need and benefit of integrated nutrient management, i.e., judicious use of inorganic and organic sources of nutrients to meet the nutrient demand of high yielding crops, increase yields and profits, and reduce soil and environmental degradation. Inadequate knowledge has constrained efforts to develop precision nutrient management recommendations that aim to rationalize input costs, increase yields and profits, and reduce environmental externalities. This Special Issue of the journal provided some evidence of the usefulness of integrated nutrient management to sustain soil resources and supply nutrients to crops grown with major cereal and legume crops in some developing countries.

Contextualizing Indigenous Knowledge in Africa and its Diaspora Ibigbolade Aderibigbe, Alloy Ihuah, Felisters Kripono, 2015-09-04 This volume proposes a wholesale adoption of African Indigenous Knowledge Systems (AIKS) as a paradigm for Africa's renewal and freedom from the whims of foreign interests. These systems, as argued here, involve balancing short-term thinking and immediate gratification with longer-term planning for future generations of Africans and the continent's diaspora. The book will be of interest to anyone concerned with development studies in Africa and its diaspora, as it offers plausible solutions to Africa's chronic developmental problems that can only be provided from within Africa rather than through the intervention of external third parties. As such, it provides vital contributions to the ongoing search for viable answers to the challenges that Africa faces today.

From Southern Theory to Decolonizing Sociolinguistics Ana Deumert, Sifree Makoni, 2023-07-07 This book, which combines scholarly articles with interviews, seeks to imagine a decolonized sociolinguistics. All the chapters are firmly grounded in southern approaches to knowledge production, focusing not only on epistemology but also on the complex relationship between epistemology and ontology. The chapters address issues ranging from author positionality to the central theorists of a southern sociolinguistics and roam from the language classroom to the church in ways which invite us to begin to decolonize ourselves and rethink normative assumptions about everything from academic writing to research methods and language teaching. The book provides scholars and teachers with inspiration for how to teach linguistics in ways that challenge colonial hegemonies and that allow one to do sociolinguistics.

otherwise It also makes a powerful argument that debates about decolonization southern theory and social justice are not just academic pursuits what is at stake is our future and how we imagine it
