In the UAE, 1 in 10 of the population has anxiety and depression. And nearly 5% of the population is estimated to be clinically depressed, while mild depression affects up to 10%. Workplace-related mental health is a pressure issue affecting people's long working hours. Financial pressures, lack of work-life balance, lack of physical activity, social pressures, 40% of UAE employees who identified as stressed, described their office and employment as the main cause. The region isn't a place where mental health issues like mental health are not discussed openly. Our team, working on mental health, are seen as a weakness, not a strength, especially in the workplace. Unspoken: Arabesque is a book that helps break the stigma and help those struggling with mental health issues.

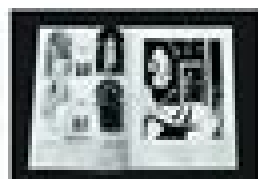

Mental health conversations, prevalent in Western markets, were not going to be effective in the UAE, especially in the workplace, where not sharing one's feelings or emotions helps people look strong and in control. A completely different way to explore the topic of working pressures for mental health was needed. In a collection of unspoken feelings was collected from those dealing with mental health issues. With over 30 artists from all over the region, unique visual illustrations were created, depicting their unspoken feelings. The illustrations were then compiled, along with the relevant questions, and a book, titled 'unspoken, uae', was published, speaking to employees whose struggles are their own words.
