Gordon, 2012-12-06 The purpose behind Computer Models in Environmental Planning is to provide a practical and applied guide to the use of these models in environmental planning and environmental impact analysis Models concerning water quality air quality stormwater runoff land capability evaluation land information systems and hazardous waste disposal are reviewed and critiqued I have tried to emphasize the practical problems with data computer capabilities and other analytical questions that must be faced by the practitioner attempting to use these models Thus I do not delve too deeply into the theoretical underpinnings of the models referring the reader instead to specialized references in this area For each environmental area I review the major models and methods comparing their assumptions ease of use and other characteristics Practical examples illustrate the benefits and problems of using each model Computer models are increasingly being used by planning and engineering professionals for locating and planning public works and industrial commercial and residential projects while evaluating their environmental impacts The requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act and related state laws as well as separate state and federal laws concerning air and water quality stormwater runoff land use and hazardous waste disposal have made the use of these methods mandatory in many circumstances Yet explanations of both the benefits and problems associated with supposedly easy to use computer versions of these models and methods remain at best difficult to retrieve and at worst incomplete

Evaluation of the Department of Veterans Affairs Mental Health Services National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Board on Health Care Services, Committee to Evaluate the Department of Veterans Affairs Mental Health Services, 2018-04-29 Approximately 4 million U S service members took part in the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq Shortly after troops started returning from their deployments some active duty service members and veterans began experiencing mental health problems Given the stressors associated with war it is not surprising that some service members developed such mental health conditions as posttraumatic stress disorder depression and substance use disorder Subsequent epidemiologic studies conducted on military and veteran populations that served in the operations in Afghanistan and Iraq provided scientific evidence that those who fought were in fact being diagnosed with mental illnesses and experiencing mental health related outcomes in particular suicide at a higher rate than the general population This report provides a comprehensive assessment of the quality capacity and access to mental health care services for veterans who served in the Armed Forces in Operation Enduring Freedom Operation Iraqi Freedom Operation New Dawn It includes an analysis of not only the quality and capacity of mental health care services within the Department of Veterans Affairs but also barriers faced by patients in utilizing those services
