

in both thinking and memory.

What does this diagram suggest about the extent to which schemas affect memory?

Bartlett (1932)

The aim of Bartlett's classic study was to investigate how the memory of a story is affected by previous knowledge. He wanted to see if cultural background and unfamiliarity with a text would lead to distortion of memory when the story was recalled. Bartlett's hypothesis was that memory is reconstructive and that people store and retrieve information according to expectations formed by cultural schemas.

Bartlett told participants a Native American legend called The War of the Ghosts. The participants were British; for them, the story was filled with unfamiliar names and concepts, and the style was foreign to them.

Bartlett allocated the participants to one of two conditions. One group was asked to use repeated reproduction, where participants heard the story and were told to reproduce it after a short time and then to do so again repeatedly over a period of days, weeks, months or years. The second group was told to use serial reproduction, in which they had to recall the story and repeat it to another person.

Bartlett found that there was no significant difference between the way that the groups recalled the story. Over time the story became shorter. Bartlett found that after six or seven reproductions, it was reduced to 150 words. The story also became more conventional - that is, it retained only those details that could be assimilated to the social and cultural background of the participants. For example, instead of "fishing seals," participants remembered that the men in the story were fishing; the word "canoe" was changed to the word "boat."

Bartlett found that there were three patterns of distortion that took place. The story became more consistent with the participants' own cultural expectations - that is, details were unconsciously changed to fit the norms of British culture. The story also became shorter with each retelling as participants omitted information which was seen as not important. Finally, participants also tended to change the order of the story in

Bilingual and ESL Classrooms Carlos Julio Ovando, Virginia P. Collier, 1998 The major goal of this book is to take a comprehensive look at research policy and effective practices in U S schools for students who are from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds The demographic predictions are that students with close connections to their bilingual bicultural heritages now labeled language minority students by the federal government will be very large in number in the near future becoming the majority in many states over the next three decades Thus we educators urgently need to provide appropriate meaningful and effective schooling for these students who too often have been underserved by U S schools This book speaks to all educators with the goal of providing rich examples of effective practices and their underlying research knowledge base page xiii

Teaching History for the Common Good Keith C. Barton, Linda S. Levstik, 2004-07-13 In Teaching History for the Common Good Barton and Levstik present a clear overview of competing ideas among educators historians politicians and the public about the nature and purpose of teaching history and they evaluate these debates in light of current research on students historical thinking In many cases disagreements about what should be taught to the nation s children and how it should be presented reflect fundamental differences that will not easily be resolved A central premise of this book though is that systematic theory and research can play an important role in such debates by providing evidence of how students think how their ideas interact with the information they encounter both in school and out and how these ideas differ across contexts Such evidence is needed as an alternative to the untested assumptions that plague so many discussions of history education The authors review research on students historical thinking and set it in the theoretical context of mediated action an approach that calls attention to the concrete actions that people undertake the human agents responsible for such actions the cultural tools that aid and constrain them their purposes and their social contexts They explain how this theory allows educators to address the breadth of practices settings purposes and tools that influence students developing understanding of the past as well as how it provides an alternative to the academic discipline of history as a way of making decisions about teaching and learning the subject in schools Beyond simply describing the factors that influence students thinking Barton and Levstik evaluate their implications for historical understanding and civic engagement They base these evaluations not on the disciplinary study of history but on the purpose of social education preparing students for participation in a pluralist democracy Their ultimate concern is how history can help citizens engage in collaboration toward the common good In Teaching History for the Common Good Barton and Levstik discuss the contribution of theory and research explain the theory of mediated action and how it guides their analysis and describe research on children s and adults knowledge of and interest in history lay out a vision of pluralist participatory democracy and its relationship to the humanistic study of history as a basis for evaluating the perspectives on the past that influence students learning explore four principal stances toward history identification analysis moral response and exhibition review research on the extent to which children and adolescents understand and accept each of these and examine how the stances might contribute to or detract from participation in a pluralist democracy address six of the principal tools of history narrative structure stories of individual achievement and motivation national narratives inquiry empathy as perspective taking and empathy as caring and review research and conventional wisdom on teachers knowledge and practice and argue that for teachers to embrace investigative multi perspectival approaches to history they need more than knowledge of content and pedagogy they need a guiding purpose that can be fulfilled only by these approaches and preparation for participatory democracy provides such purpose Teaching History for the Common Good is essential reading for history and social studies professionals researchers teacher educators and students as well as for policymakers parents and members of the general public who are interested in history education or in students thinking and learning about the subject Teaching Elementary Social Studies James Zarrillo,2000 This text presents a methodology that offers every child a chance to succeed regardless of language culture intellectual ability physical attributes emotional capabilities or social skills Teaching Elementary Social Studies encourages teachers to recognize that each child is unique and brings a special set of skills and abilities to the classroom The unifying theme of the text is diversity and the author introduces several dimensions beyond the pluralistic nature of the student population It promotes the idea that diverse students require a diverse pedagogy and offers specific ways to introduce meaningful topics in ways that will engage all students Provides a foundation for teaching social studies Informs pre service teachers about the national standards documents that dictate curriculum planning for social studies Introduces students to Expectations for Excellence Curriculum Standards for the Social Studies National Standards for Civics and Government National Content Standards in Economics Geography for Life and National Standards for History Addresses the fundamentals of teaching social studies Provides instruction for creating lessons based on MI inquiry and student interaction Advocates the need for social studies lessons that infuse multicultural perspectives Each lesson mini lesson group project or unit concludes with a section on Effective Teaching in Today s Diverse Classroom Includes descriptions of activities group projects lessons and mini lessons to model good social studies instruction Includes numerous examples of multicultural literature Samples lessons mini lessons projects and activities all reference multiculturaland historical literature and Internet websites teachers can access to enrich social studies teaching and learning Promotes good citizenship as a goal of social studies Annual Proceedings of Selected Research and Development Presentations at the ...
