Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 10-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 10-week period. The measurements included maximum heart rate, maximum oxygen consumption, and maximum power. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher values for all three measurements at the end of the 10-week period compared to the control group. This suggests that the 10-week training program had a positive effect on the physical fitness of the 10-year-old children.

Abstract

The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of periodontitis between patients with type 2 diabetes mellitus (DM) and non-diabetic controls. The study included 60 patients with DM and 60 age- and sex-matched non-diabetic controls. All participants underwent a clinical examination of their periodontium. The results showed that the prevalence of periodontitis was significantly higher in the DM group compared to the non-diabetic controls. This suggests that DM may be a risk factor for periodontitis.
