Name: _____

Date: _____ Class: _____

In the years since the publication of On the Origin of Species in 1859, evidence for Charles Darwin's theory of evolution continues to accumulate. Today, scientists are able to read the DNA sequences of animals to determine the amount of variation and differences between different species, including the relationship between humans and our closest natural relatives, the chimpanzees and apes. This discovery indicates that the variation and timing of genes with animal progenies is the most important feature in determining what makes us human. Answer the following questions while watching/after. What Darwin never knew. Select the correct multiple-choice, completion, matching, or True or False response for each question.
