Story by Story Thomas Alderson Davis, Robert Arnold Johnson, 2019-07-12 This volume brings together two authors one a psychiatrist one a philosopher to listen to one another's reading of five stories of what it's like to bear a different mental or physical illness The beginning story or anchor for the conversation that unfolds between them is that of a person subject to recurring spells of catatonia the uncanniest of human conditions They discover that truly understanding what an illness is calls for understanding it within the context of who suffers it that to understand illness is to establish the right relation between what is being suffered and who is suffering it This deceptively simple way of talking which is labelled who what talk will prove more practical and more clarifying than will terms like mental and physical Furthermore it has this additional dividend it intrinsically resists a temptation toward medical prejudice the inclination for doctors and other caregivers to lose the who of the sufferer through their focus on the what of her illness

Trust and Schooling Bruce Haynes, 2020-06-29 Unlike many current approaches this book looks at trust relations in order to understand schooling and other social practices Trust relations include both what an individual is prepared to trust in the circumstances and what a competent practitioner in an evolving tradition should trust It is therefore considered whether trust relations are more fundamental in society than those of truth or power Schooling has a social as well as an education role As a result the scope of the trust relations under investigation must range beyond the pedagogical By expanding our understanding of the trust relations required to create and maintain effective schooling in particular circumstances it may be possible for a greater section of society to receive a good education Issues including curriculum classroom management and community relations may be understood in a different way and help enable currently intractable problems to be tackled more effectively This book presents the initial investigations of a number of authors who collaborated on this project and was originally published as a special issue of the journal Educational Philosophy and Theory AN

Jesus in Paul's Letters: A Pastoral Analysis Edwin

Walhout,2016-07-04 JESUS in PAUL S LETTERS A Pastoral Analysis This project began as an exploration of the somewhat baffling things Paul writes about Jesus in his letters to the churches in Colossae and Ephesus Having completed those studies I turned to the oft misunderstood kenosis passage in Philippians and from there decided to look at all the letters of Paul to see what they meant for Christology Paul is clearly not Christocentric in his theology He is Theocentric so that his Christology is a subset of Theology and his Soteriology becomes a subset of both Theology and Christology Thus trinitarian

Debating Social Rights Conor Gearty,Virginia Mantouvalou,2010-12-09 Debating Law is a new series that gives scholarly experts the opportunity to offer contrasting perspectives on significant topics of contemporary general interest In this second volume of the series Conor Gearty argues that for rights to work effectively in the wider promotion of social justice they need to be kept as far away as possible from the courts He acknowledges the value of rights language in legal and political debate and accepts that human rights are not solely civil and political with social rights language clearly having a progressive emancipatory dimension However he says that lawyers even well intentioned lawyers damage the achievability of the kind of radical transformation in the priorities of states that a genuine commitment to social rights surely necessitates Virginia Mantouvalou argues that social rights defined as entitlements to the satisfaction of basic needs are as essential for the well being of the individual and the community as long established civil and political rights The real challenge she suggests is how best to give effect to social rights Drawing on examples from around the world she argues for their legalisation and examines the role of courts and the role of legislatures in this process both at a national and a international level
