

Summer Surprise

By Rebecca White

"Well do you or don't you?" asked Sally.

"Do I or don't I what?" asked Angelica quickly, annoyed.

"Do you or don't you believe in the tooth fairy?"

"Of course I don't!" Angelica snapped back, quickly. "That's kids' stuff."

"No it's not. I've seen the tooth fairy with my own two eyes."

"Yeah, right," said Angelica. The two girls were sitting on Sally's front porch, the hot summer sun making them sweat. Sally's mother had offered them lemonade, but what they really wanted was popsicles.

"You don't believe me?" asked Sally. "I'll show you!"

Sally jumped up and started running out into the front lawn.

"Wait!" said Angelica.

"Don't go too far, girls!" shouted Sally's mother through the open kitchen window.

"We won't!" said Sally and Angelica in unison.

Angelica could barely keep up, Sally was running really fast. Where could she possibly be taking me? wondered Angelica.

Sally was half skipping, half running around the large, white two-story house to the backyard. Her ponytail swayed this way and that, and Angelica wished that her hair was just as long. As it was now, Angelica's hair barely reached below her ears, and she couldn't put it up at all anymore because she'd just gotten a haircut.

"Hey, where are we going!?" asked Angelica, running out of breath.

"Right over here!" said Sally, who stopped suddenly in the middle of a patch of dandelions. "Look at this!"

Models of Science Dynamics Andrea Scharnhorst, Katy Börner, Peter van den Besselaar, 2012-01-24 Models of Science Dynamics aims to capture the structure and evolution of science the emerging arena in which scholars science and the communication of science become themselves the basic objects of research In order to capture the essence of phenomena as diverse as the structure of co authorship networks or the evolution of citation diffusion patterns such models can be represented by conceptual models based on historical and ethnographic observations mathematical descriptions of measurable phenomena or computational algorithms Despite its evident importance the mathematical modeling of science still lacks a unifying framework and a comprehensive study of the topic This volume fills this gap reviewing and describing major threads in the mathematical modeling of science dynamics for a wider academic and professional audience The model classes presented cover stochastic and statistical models system dynamics approaches agent based simulations population dynamics models and complex network models The book comprises an introduction and a foundational chapter that defines and operationalizes terminology used in the study of science as well as a review chapter that discusses the history of mathematical approaches to modeling science from an algorithmic historiography perspective It concludes with a survey of remaining challenges for future science models and their relevance for science and science policy
