Feerick,2010-10-02 Strangers in Blood explores

in a range of early modern literature the association between migration to foreign lands and the moral and physical degeneration of individuals Arguing that in early modern discourse the concept of race was primarily linked with notions of bloodline lineage and genealogy rather than with skin colour and ethnicity Jean E Feerick establishes that the characterization of settler communities as subject to degenerative decline constituted a massive challenge to the fixed system of blood that had hitherto underpinned the English social hierarchy Considering contexts as diverse as Ireland Virginia and the West Indies Strangers in Blood tracks the widespread cultural concern that moving out of England would adversely affect the temper and complexion of the displaced individual changes that could be fought only through willed acts of self discipline In emphasizing the decline of blood as found at the centre of colonial narratives Feerick illustrates the unwitting disassembling of one racial system and the creation of another

Romance on the Early Modern Stage

Cyrus Mulready, 2013-08-22 What is dramatic romance Scholars have long turned to Shakespeare's biography to answer this question marking his late plays as the beginning and end of the dramatic romance This book identifies an earlier history for this genre revealing how stage romances imaginatively expanded audience interest in England's emerging global economy

Blood and Home in Early Modern Drama Ariane M. Balizet, 2014-04-24 In this volume the author argues that blood was crucially a means by which dramatists negotiated shifting contours of domesticity in 16th and 17th century England Early modern English drama vividly addressed contemporary debates over an expanding idea of the domestic which encompassed the domus as well as sex parenthood household order the relationship between home and state and the connections between family honor and national identity The author contends that the domestic ideology expressed by theatrical depictions of marriage and household order is one built on the simultaneous familiarity and violence inherent to blood The theatrical relation between blood and home is far more intricate than the idealized language of the familial bloodline the home was itself a bloody place with domestic bloodstains signifying a range of experiences including religious worship sex murder birth healing and holy justice Focusing on four bleeding figures the Bleeding Bride Bleeding Husband Bleeding Child and Bleeding Patient the author argues that the household blood of the early modern stage not only expressed the violence and conflict occasioned by domestic ideology but also established the home as a site that alternately reified and challenged patriarchal authority
