have an open discussion about what items were examples or non-examples.

16. Ask:
 - What are the similarities in appearance of the examples?
 - What do these examples have in common?
 - Is it possible to tell the difference between the examples and non-examples based on appearance?
 - What are some of the ideas and physical properties that allow you to distinguish the difference between them?
17. Guide the students to the idea that the Examples and Non-Examples may be distinguished on the basis of the uniform or non-uniform appearance or other properties of the special type of mixture.
18. Say, "The properties of the hot tea, and the salt water are that they seem to be uniform or evenly mixed. Can you see the salt? Can you see the powdered tea?"
19. Say, "Which of the items are non-uniform or not evenly mixed?" Direct the students to conclude that the non-examples are non-uniform and are not evenly mixed.
20. Say, "We call the Non-Examples just simple or plain mixtures. We learned about simple mixtures previously in this lesson. The special type of mixture is called a solution. Solutions are mixtures in which different kinds of matter are spread out evenly."
21. Allow the students to write this information on their journals.
