Coherence Between Classroom Assessment and Accountability National Society for the Study of Education, 2004-04-15

In analyses of the role of national educational assessment insufficient attention has been paid to the central place of the classroom Rather than encouraging a two way flow of information today s standards based frameworks tend to direct the flow of accountability from the outside into the classroom The authors of this volume emphasize that assessment as it exists in schools today consists mainly of the measurements that teachers themselves design evaluate and act upon every day Improving the usefulness of assessment in schools primarily requires assisting and harnessing this flood of assessment information both as a means of learning within the classroom and as the source of crucial information flowing out of classrooms This volume aims to encourage debate and reflection among educational researchers professionals and policymakers Five source chapters describe successful classroom assessment models developed in partnership with teachers while additional commentaries give a range of perspectives on the issues of classroom assessment standardized testing and accountability New Perspectives on Intercultural Language Research and Teaching Melina Porto, Michael

Byram, 2016-06-10 Illustrated by an empirical study of English as a Foreign Language reading in Argentina this book argues for a different approach to the theoretical rationales and methodological designs typically used to investigate cultural understanding in reading in particular foreign language reading It presents an alternative approach which is more authentic in its methods more educational in its purposes and more supportive of international understanding as an aim of language teaching in general and English language teaching in particular
