Development Cases from Central America brings together a set of experiences that applied behavioral insights to different areas of public policy in some cases through randomized control trials and in others using surveys or behavioral games These experiences collectively show the promise of public policies that are informed by a better understanding of what drives individual behavior In Costa Rica for example informing households of how much water they consume relative to their neighbors reduced water consumption chapter 1 In Guatemala altering the way government communicates with taxpayers increased revenue collection chapter 2 In Nicaragua an analysis of a cash transfer program found that children in households receiving benefits exhibited significantly higher cognitive development a result influenced by parental behavior changes during the program chapter 3 In El Salvador we explore how different biases explain the apparent puzzle of a gas subsidy reform that benefited most of the population yet proved to be widely unpopular chapter 4 Chapter 5 also uses behavioral insights to analyze subsidy reforms in El Salvador this time using a different methodology a set of economic behavioral games designed to evaluate the willingness of individuals to accept subsidy reforms that would affect them directly Finally chapter 6 reflects on the progress made in applying behavioral insights in a development context These cases illustrate in practice some of the findings of the World Development Report 2015 Mind Society and Behavior In particular they demonstrate the possibility of using nontraditional tools complementary to regulation in contexts where time and resources are limited The World Bank has since established a Mind Behavior and Development eMBed Unit within the Poverty and Equity Global Practice to mainstream and scale up behavioral science in public policies and programs We hope these experiences will help to inform other practitioners about the potential of applying behavioral insights in a development context and will encourage them to consider such approaches as a complement to traditional policy measures
