Piedmont, 2013-11-11 The assessment of individual differences has a long history As early as 2200 B C the Chinese were employing methods to select candidates for civil service positions Over the ensuing centuries philosophers theologians and the nobility all noticed and debated the role of character in shaping the destiny and quality of individual lives This interest spawned widely different methods of evaluating the timbre of temperament bumps on the head lines on the hand shape of the body all of which were employed in attempts to gain insight into basic human motives The emergence of the scientific method and its application to this endeavor reinvigorated society's efforts in this direction and an abundant variety of assessment instruments consequently became available The outbreak of World War I created a need for the efficient assessment of individual differences in large groups Such instruments as the Woodworth Personal Data Sheet and the Army Alpha Test resulted in genuine breakthroughs in assessment technology These tests provided standardized sets of items that permitted quantitative comparisons among people Over the years numerous scales have been developed which have been based on widely differing levels of psychometric sophistication Behavioral Assessment and Rehabilitation of the Traumatically Brain-Damaged Barry A. Edelstein, Eugene T. Couture, 2013-11-22 This book developed out of the editors' longstanding interest in the retraining of traumatically brain damaged adults and the management of their behavior by family members A search for relevant experimental evidence to support the clinical use of behavioral principles for retraining which began in 1977 turned up little empirical support Moreover the literature on retraining was dispersed among a variety of journals published in various countries Nowhere was there a compendium of literature that addressed issues of assessment and retraining There was no place to turn if one wanted to move from a standard neuropsychological evaluation to the retraining of skill deficits revealed in the evaluation We have attempted to edit a book that represents what we had hoped to find in the literature and could be used by professionals in clinical psychology clinical neuropsychology rehabilitation medicine physical therapy speech therapy and other disciplines that address rehabilitation of brain damaged adults a book that addresses assessment and rehabilitation issues and is sufficiently detailed to offer the reader a starting point in developing behavioral assessment and rehabilitation programs The book contains conceptual foundations reviews of research descriptions of successful rehabilitation programs and relatively detailed approaches to the retraining of specific skills A shift from an assessment based practice to one encompassing both prescriptive assessment and treatment has become a recognized transition in the neuropsychological literature and was best articulated in an article by Gerald Goldstein in March of 1979

Summary of ARI Research on Military Delinquency D. B. Bell, R. F. Holz, 1975 Most ARI research on military delinquency has focused on predicting at the point of entry those personnel most likely to commit delinquent acts within a fixed time period e g by the end of Basic Combat Training Across the variety of investigations which focused on various types of delinquency some consistent findings emerge Component of service i e volunteers vs draftees and several closely associated variables age at entry level of education and mental ability are associated with delinquent acts such background data and peer ratings provide the best predictors Attempts to develop a more precise profile of the military delinquent have not been very successful and programs aimed at rehabilitation of potential delinquents have actually proved counterproductive All of these outcomes suggest that future research should concentrate more on the context in which delinquency occurs and less on the characteristics of those who commit delinquent acts
