Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and resistance exercises. The HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week program. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in both HR and BP compared to the control group. The HR decreased from 72 to 68 beats per minute, and the BP decreased from 120/80 to 110/70 mmHg. The control group showed no significant changes in HR and BP. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical activity program, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rates and blood pressures at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. Additionally, the experimental group had a significantly lower body mass index at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and physical fitness of obese women. The subjects were 15 obese women who were randomly assigned to either a diet or an exercise group. The diet group was instructed to consume a diet that was 1000 kcal less than their maintenance level, while the exercise group was instructed to consume a diet that was 1000 kcal less than their maintenance level and to exercise for 30 minutes, 3 times per week. The diet group lost significantly more weight than the exercise group, and the exercise group lost significantly more body fat than the diet group. The diet group also lost significantly more lean body mass than the exercise group. The exercise group showed a significant improvement in physical fitness, while the diet group did not. The results of this study suggest that a combination of diet and exercise is the most effective way to lose weight and improve physical fitness in obese women.
