Unique Global Imports Key

Unique Global Imports Key:

China's Vulnerability Paradox Pascale Massot, 2024 China's Vulnerability Paradox explains the uneven transformations in global commodity markets resulting from China's contemporary dramatic economic growth. At times China displays vulnerabilities towards global commodity markets because of unequal positions of market power. Why is it that Chinese stakeholders are often unable to shape markets in their preferred direction? Why have some markets undergone fundamental changes while other similar ones did not? And how can we explain the uneven liberalization dynamics across markets? Through a series of case studies, Pascale Massot argues that the balance of market power between Chinese domestic and international market stakeholders explains their behavior as well as the likelihood of global institutional change. At a time of deepening US-China economic tensions, this book provides an alternative granular understanding of the interacting dynamics between the political economy of Chinese and global markets.

Global Materials Compliance Handbook John Phyper, Philippe Ducas, Peter J. Baish, 2004-01-23 Whether a company operates global facilities or just imports/exports goods to the United States, personnel and advisors must understand regulatory requirements. Most companies that ship or receive goods internationally have developed MCS that address regulatory requirements; however, these typically are labor-intensive, independent of other company systems, adequately address only their primary location, and are not updated in a timely manner. Supply chain logistics is complicated, and this book details how to avoid security holds on shipments and gives sound advice on how to cope if another 9/11 occurs. The book provides easy-to-understand guidance to shipping/receiving personnel, safety inspectors, transportation and logistics managers on the movement of hazardous cargo from one location to another, ensuring compliance to the maze of regulatory requirements.

Economics of the Pandemic Cai Fang, 2021-09-27 The year 2020 marked the time when China expected to attain its goal of building a moderately prosperous society in all respects. Yet it has witnessed the emergence of COVID-19 as a global pandemic that has spread to almost all countries and regions throughout the world. This serious public health disaster has brought with it severe economic shock, resulting in unexpected challenges to the completion of economic and social development goals. This title compiles the latest research from a variety of perspectives into the impact of COVID-19 on the Chinese economy. Economic experts and scholars from the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences analyze the current trends as well as short-term and long-term countermeasures in the agricultural, industrial, employment, and public health sectors and focus on supply and demand. They argue that China's actions toward and promotion of economic recovery need to adapt to variability and uncertainty, and policy choices should be made in the light of the dialectical relationship between variance and invariance. The book will appeal to students and scholars of economics, political science, and social development.

Great Powers, Climate Change, and Global Environmental Responsibilities Robert Falkner, Barry Buzan, 2022-01-10 This book is the first of its kind to examine the role of great powers in the international politics of climate change. It develops a novel analytical framework for studying environmental power in international relations: what counts as a great power in the environmental field and what their special environmental responsibilities are. In doing so, the book connects International Relations (IR) debates on power inequality, great powers and great power management with global environmental politics. GEP scholarship The book brings together leading scholars in IR and GEP whose contributions focus on major environmental powers: United States, China, European Union, India, Brazil, Russia and international institutions and issue areas: UN Security Council, multilateral environmental agreements, international climate leadership, coal politics. The contributors to this volume examine how individual great powers have responded to the global climate challenge and whether they have accepted a special responsibility for stabilizing the global climate. They place emerging discourses on great power responsibility in the context of wider debates about international environmental leadership and climate change securitization. And they provide new insights into how international power inequality intersects with the global ecological crisis and what special role great powers could and should play in the international fight against global warming.

Nations,2024-07-02 The OECD FAO Agricultural Outlook 2024 2033 provides a consensus assessment of the ten year prospects for agricultural commodity and fish markets This Outlook edition reveals important trends Emerging economies will be pivotal in shaping the global agricultural landscape with India expected to overtake China as the leading player Yet calorie intake growth in low income countries is projected to be only 4% Agriculture s global greenhouse gas intensity is projected to decline although direct emissions from agriculture will likely increase by 5% If food loss and waste could be halved however this would have the potential to reduce both global agricultural GHG emissions by 4% and the number of undernourished people by 153 million by 2030 Well functioning international agricultural commodity markets will remain vital for global food security and rural livelihoods Expected developments should keep real international reference prices on a slightly declining trend over the next ten years although environmental social geopolitical and economic factors could significantly alter these projections More information can be found at www.agri-outlook.org GM Food Systems and
