Neddermeyer,2012-12-06 The publication entitled Surface Studies by Scanning Tunneling Microscopy by Binnig Rohrer Gerber and Weibel of the IBM Research Laboratory in Rüschlikon in 1982 immediately raised considerable interest in the surface science community It was demonstrated in Reference R1 that images from atomic structures of surfaces like individual steps could be obtained simply by scanning the surface with a sharp metal tip which was kept in a constant distance of approximately 10 Å from the sample surface The distance control in scanning tunneling microscopy STM was realized by a feedback circuit where the electrical tunneling current through the potential barrier between tip and sample is used for regulating the tip position with a piezoelectric xyz system A similar experimental approach has already been described by Young et al for the determination of the macroscopic roughness of a surface A number of experimental difficulties had to be solved by the IBM group until this conceptual simple microscopic method could be applied successfully with atomic resolution Firstly distance and scanning control of the tip have to be operated with sufficient precision to be sensitive to atomic structures Secondly sample holder and tunneling unit have to be designed in such a way that external vibrations do not influence the sample tip distance and that thermal or other drift effects become small enough during measurement of one image Resources in Education ,1994 How to Multiply, Grades 4-6 Robert Smith,2000-03 Presents comprehensive overview of multiplication of whole numbers to be used in classrooms or at home Everyday Mathematics Teacher Lesson Guide Volume 1 Grade 5 University of Chicago.
