communities can collaborate across systems and sectors to address environmental health disparities with in depth studies of three efforts to address long standing environmental health issues childhood lead poisoning in Rochester New York unhealthy built environments in Duluth Minnesota and pollution related to commercial ports and international trade in Southern California All three efforts were locally initiated driven by local stakeholders and each addressed issues long known to the community by reframing an old problem in a new way These local efforts leveraged resources to impact community change by focusing on inequities in environmental health bringing diverse kinds of knowledge to bear and forging new connections among existing community academic and government groups Korfmacher explains how the once integrated environmental and public health management systems had become separated into self contained silos and compares current efforts to bridge these separations to the development of ecosystem management in the 1990s Community groups government agencies academic institutions and private institutions each have a role to play but collaborating effectively requires stakeholders to appreciate their partners diverse incentives capacities and constraints
