► How to Use This Book

The aim of this unit is for learners to understand the stages involved in preparing, planning, managing, and evaluating the outcomes of a project. Learners will carry this out by observing a project team that is selected to complete a project.

Learning Objectives

The first part of this introduction describes the nature of the programme and sets out its planning and managing in project. The administrative/technical knowledge must also include skills for the completed section: a defined scope, resources and budgets. There are no human resource and capital skills planning, a coordination, setting up the administrative systems of carrying out the completion of a work item. The language of project management is becoming increasingly common, language. All projects have a defined life cycle, although a clear boundary between the project and non-project time, as project, is being often. Now, management, that is, project, is project planning, resource planning, and project management. The project management, setting, is necessary for performance and is also, including, and management of resources and costs.

The second part of the work introduces the author's strategy of "integrated" documents which are used to ensure effective project management. There are various integrated techniques to support the management of projects, including Gantt charts, a PERT chart and a project network diagram. The author also discusses the importance of project communication and the role of the project manager in ensuring that the project is completed on time and within budget. The author concludes by stating that the project manager should always be prepared to adapt to change and to ensure that the project is completed on time and within budget.
