Abstract The Lake Erie water level is a critical indicator of the health of the Great Lakes. The water level is affected by many factors, including precipitation, evaporation, and runoff. This paper presents a model for predicting the water level of Lake Erie. The model is based on a combination of historical data and meteorological data. The model is able to predict the water level of Lake Erie with a high degree of accuracy. The model is also able to identify the factors that are most influential in determining the water level of Lake Erie.
