Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks for physical and psychological health. The physical health assessment included measurements of body mass index (BMI), waist circumference, and blood pressure. The psychological health assessment included measurements of self-esteem, anxiety, and depression. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program resulted in a significant decrease in BMI, waist circumference, and blood pressure. The walking program also resulted in a significant increase in self-esteem and a significant decrease in anxiety and depression. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Figure 1 The effect of the temperature of the water on the rate of diffusion of a substance. The diagram shows a beaker of water with a thermometer and a small container of dye. The dye is being added to the water, and the temperature of the water is being measured. The diagram illustrates that the rate of diffusion is affected by the temperature of the water.

QUESTION — A 40-year-old woman presents with a 2-week history of fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. She reports feeling "tired all the time" and has lost about 10 pounds (4.5 kg) without trying. She has noticed that her hair is falling out more than usual and that her skin feels dry. She has no other symptoms and no recent travel or contact with sick people. Her medical history is unremarkable, and she is not taking any medications. What is the most likely diagnosis?
