

Le temps

Tracy Stewart

Academic Focus: Vocabulary

Target Level: French 1, 2

Learning Targets: I can communicate, in speaking and writing, to describe various weather conditions in French.

Ready/Review: Two Activities

Activity 1: As a quick warm-up each day, select a student to come to the board and write an appropriate French weather expression for that day. This could also be combined with a review of writing the day's date in the proper format.

Activity 2: Prepare a set of weather flash cards or signs with images of various weather conditions on each card (without any words). Students have fun identifying the correct weather expressions based on the image. This can easily be turned into a timed competition. Shuffle the weather flash cards and turn them face down in a pile. Supply students with a stopwatch (or an timer you hold yourself) to time how long it takes each student to correctly run through all the weather expressions. (Join students in the small group that have their chance at this speed round.)

Activity 3: This activity works well for students who have other learned clothing vocabulary. The teacher should prepare a list of items (and with all sorts of clothing items) suitable for various climates. The teacher pulls out one clothing item at a time. The teacher then asks the class for an appropriate French weather expression that would describe that climate suited to the article of clothing. After receiving several correct responses, the teacher could expand the activity by asking students to also give appropriate weather expressions in the negative that wouldn't work for that same clothing item. The teacher continues with other items pulled from the list above.

Activity 4: Students can be asked to write one sentence that identifies an appropriate weather expression for each month of the year. Expand this activity by asking for appropriate weather expressions for the four seasons (based on where students live).

Enrichment: Two Activities

Activity 5: It works an excellent study that class is left and provide two choices of items or places for them to choose from. Tell students to think of their favorite location (and what part of weather would be experienced there). One student begins by stating what type of weather he or she would experience and the teacher pulls them state where he or she is going. "If I go to visit, I will go to California." The next student then repeats the process, but may not use the same weather expression that was heard previously. As soon as the student's partner or expression and a place location, he or she must then include the previous person's statement. The activity continues until all students in the circle have gone. For students who forget previous students' responses, simply have students repeat what they have said.

Activity 6: Students in pairs (Match the sentence) have students work with partners. Call out a French weather expression to the class. One student in each pair uses the given expression to begin a sentence, starting with the French word for "either" ("C'est soit..."). The other student must then finish the sentence in an appropriate way. The teacher may then call on various students for their responses. For the next round, students repeat their roles. For variety, the teacher may call out an expression phrased negatively.

Activity 7: Conversation starters for students: Do you prefer hot weather or cold weather? What are the hottest and coldest temperatures you have ever felt? Do you get snow where you live? Does the weather affect your mood? How often you ever been trapped in a storm? During which month do you get the most rain? Do you watch the weather forecast on TV? Do you ever check ahead of time if hot weather? Do you like to play in the rain or the snow?

Advanced: Two Activities

Activity 8: Les météo (The Weather Forecast) Each student will prepare a two-weather report. Students must give a weather map of the United States from a newspaper or printed from the internet. Then, each student will prepare short statements about the weather of different areas of the country. In doing this, students must also recall all of the directions: north (au nord), south (au sud), east (à l'est) and west (à l'ouest). Students will then make one specific statement about the weather in his or her home state (Mon état d'est très chaud!). The teacher could also have students state the temperatures of several major cities (À Chicago, il fait degrés.) rather than their map.

Activity 9: Divide the class into teams of three to five students. Each team must be given a few index cards for writing notes and a pen or pencil. The teacher first writes a French weather expression on the board as a "forecast" station. The teacher gives the class 30 to 45 seconds (using a timer) to incorporate this weather expression into a longer, fully developed sentence in French. At the end of the time, all writing stops. Each team must have one of its members read their sentence aloud to the class. To make this into a competition, the teacher could award one point if the sentence is grammatically correct or award a team one point for every correct French word used to respond to the forecast.

Activity 10: Have students watch a weather forecast from a French television station (or use also use the internet or YouTube video). Students work in small groups to summarize the forecast in English.
