

The major secondary systems of a pressurized water reactor are the main steam system and the condensate/feedwater system. Since the primary and secondary systems are physically separated from each other (by the steam generator tubes), the secondary system will contain little or no radioactive material.

The main steam system starts at the outlet of the steam generator. The steam is routed to the high pressure main turbine. After passing through the high pressure turbine, the steam is piped to the moisture separator/reheaters (MSRs). In the MSRs, the steam is dried with moisture separators and reheated using other steam as a heat source. From the MSRs, the steam goes to the low pressure turbines. After passing through the low pressure turbines, the steam goes to the main condenser, which is operated at a vacuum to allow for the greatest removal of energy by the low pressure turbines. The steam is condensed into water by the flow of circulating water through the condenser tubes.

At this point, the condensate/feedwater system starts. The condensed steam collects in the hotwell area of the main condenser. The condensate pumps take a suction on the hotwell to increase the pressure of the water. The condensate then passes through a cleanup system to remove any impurities in the water. This is necessary because the steam generator acts as a concentrator. If the impurities are not removed, they will be left in the steam generator after the steam forming process, and this could reduce the heat transfer capability of the steam generator and/or damage the steam generator tubes. The condensate then passes through some low pressure feedwater heaters. The temperature of the condensate is increased in the heaters by using steam from the low pressure turbine (extraction steam). The condensate flow then enters the suction of the main feedwater pumps, which increases the pressure of the water high enough to enter the steam generator. The feedwater now passes through a set of high pressure feedwater heaters, which are heated by extraction steam from the high pressure turbine (heating the feedwater helps to increase the efficiency of the plant). The flow rate of the feedwater is controlled as it enters the steam generators.
