Jerome, 2015-03-04 But as time went on it grew to be a bit of a bore You see it was full of sadness There was nothing cheerful or genial about it You felt sorry for it but it irritated you It would sit on the stairs and cry for hours at a stretch and whenever we woke up in the night one was sure to hear it pottering about the passages and in and out of the different rooms moaning and sighing so that we could not get to sleep again very easily And when we had a party on it would come and sit outside the drawing room door and sob all the time It did not do anybody any harm exactly but it cast a gloom over the whole affair Oh I'm getting sick of this old fool said the Pater one evening the Dad can be very blunt when he is put out as you know after Johnson had been more of a nuisance than usual and had spoiled a good game of whist by sitting up the chimney and groaning till nobody knew what were trumps or what suit had been led even We shall have to get rid of him somehow or other I wish I knew how to do it Told After Supper Jerome K.
