Abstract

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological characteristics of young women. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The subjects were 12 young women, aged 18-25, who were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group underwent a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and strength training. The control group did not undergo any training. The physical characteristics measured were maximum oxygen consumption ($\dot{V}O_{2max}$), maximum heart rate (HR_{max}), and maximum power output (P_{max}). The psychological characteristics measured were anxiety, depression, and self-esteem. The results showed that the experimental group had significantly higher $\dot{V}O_{2max}$, HR_{max} , and P_{max} than the control group after 12 weeks of training. Additionally, the experimental group had significantly lower anxiety and depression, and higher self-esteem than the control group after 12 weeks of training. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological characteristics of young women.
