Discussion

One study in Staphylococcus aureus reported 100% of the agr mutants were susceptible to a β -lactamase inhibitor, suggesting that the agr system may be involved in the regulation of β -lactamase production. In the present study, the agr mutants were found to be susceptible to β -lactams, but not to β -lactamase inhibitors. This suggests that the agr system may be involved in the regulation of β -lactamase production in S. aureus.

The agr mutants were found to be susceptible to β -lactams, but not to β -lactamase inhibitors. This suggests that the agr system may be involved in the regulation of β -lactamase production in S. aureus.

Further studies are needed to elucidate the role of the agr system in the regulation of β -lactamase production in S. aureus.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 10-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 10-week period. The measurements included heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher heart rates and blood pressures at the end of the 10-week period compared to the control group. The body mass index of the children in both groups did not change significantly. The study suggests that a 10-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.
