3 pages | 607 words

The Black Box

In the short story “The Lottery” the black box represents the longevity of the tradition and death. The tradition of the lottery had been around even before the oldest man in the village was born, even though some feared the box, they did not dare to do anything to it since it was the exact representation of the tradition and that would upset it (Walker 1). This implies that the citizens of this village have been too involved in this tradition for so long that they no longer know how reckless and heartless it is. This box became shabbier and the black color that it used to have had now faded (Walker 2). Comparatively, a coffin also loses color as time passes and with it, death also comes. This black box symbolizes the loyalty these citizens have to the tradition and the death that comes with it.

Original Ritual/Ceremony

The original ritual represents how some parts have changed but the purpose is still the same. For example, the ritual had changed to slips of paper because the population increased (Walker 2). In addition, their role did not change, it still served the purpose that it represented each citizen. Similarly, the black box became shabbier and the color faded (Walker 2). Yet the purpose was still to carry the slips of paper that decided who will be chosen to die. The original ritual shows how even though some things were changed, the purpose remained and was not doubted.

Slips of Paper

The slips of paper inside the black box represent fate and power. The box had wooden chips but later changed to slips of paper because the population increased (Walker 2). This shows how there was a paper for everyone in the village, therefore, no one escaped the fate and fear this tradition brought. When the paper chose the Hutchinson family, Mr. Graves dropped the other slips of paper and the breeze ‘lifted them up’ (Walker 6). This describes a mysterious tone since it shows how it can determine fate at one spot since the other people were now free of fear. The slips of paper have the power to choose the fate of these people.

Old Man Warner

Old man Warner symbolizes the blind acceptance that these people have for the tradition. When they were talking about villages giving up the lottery, old man Warner responded calling them a ‘pack of fools’ (Walker 4). This proves that this man fails to see the perturbation behind this tradition to the point to which he is completely loyal to it. When they chose Tessie by chance, old man Warner could no longer wait to throw stones at her saying ‘come on’ multiple times (Walker 7). Furthermore, this man continues to prove how blindly the citizens follow this tradition that they see it as something natural. Old man Warner is an example of the blind acceptance the citizens have to this cruel tradition.

Mr. Summers

Mr. Summers represents the bearer of death in this village. Mr. Summers role in the lottery was to create the slips of paper and organize...

Joyce Carol Oates Oliver Sacks George Steiner Thomas Chatterton Williams and others Bacon's Essays with Introduction, Notes and Index by Edwin A. Abbott ... Francis Bacon, 1889 Essays in Quasi-Realism Simon Blackburn, 1993-06-17 This volume collects some influential essays in which Simon Blackburn one of our leading philosophers explores one of the most profound and fertile of philosophical problems the way in which our judgments relate to the world This debate has centered on realism or the view that what we say is validated by the way things stand in the world and a variety of oppositions to it Prominent among the latter are expressive and projective theories but also a relaxed pluralism that discourages the view that there are substantial issues at stake The figure of the quasi realist dramatizes the difficulty of conducting these debates Typically philosophers thinking of themselves as realists will believe that they alone can give a proper or literal account of some of our attachments to truth to facts to the independent world to knowledge and certainty The quasi realist challenge developed by Blackburn in this volume is that we can have those attachments without any metaphysic that deserves to be called realism so that the metaphysical picture that goes with our practices is quite idle The cases treated here include the theories of value and knowledge modality probability causation intentionality and rule following and explanation A substantial new introduction has been added drawing together some of the central themes The essays articulate a fresh alternative to a primitive realist anti realist opposition and their cumulative effect is to yield a new appreciation of the delicacy of the debate in these central areas Bacon's essays, with intr., notes and index by E.A.
