Africa and the Victorians Ronald Robinson, 2014-09-30 Imperialism in the eyes of the world is still Europe's original sin even though the empires themselves have long since disappeared Among the most egregious of imperial acts was Victorian Britain's seemingly random partition of Africa In this classic work of history a standard text for generations of students and historians now again available the authors provide a unique account of the motives that went into the continent's partition Distrusting mechanistic explanations in terms of economic growth or the European balance the authors consider the intentions in the minds of the partitioners themselves Decision by decision the reasoning of prime ministers Gladstone Salisbury and Rosebery their advisors and opponents is carefully analysed The result is a history of imperialism in the making not as it appeared to later commentators and historians but as the empire makers themselves experienced it from day to day Featuring a new introduction by Wm Roger Louis this new edition will bring a classic work to a new generation and will be essential reading for all students of nineteenth century history

The Scramble for Africa Thomas Pakenham, 1992 In 1880 the continent of Africa was largely unexplored by Europeans Less than thirty years later only Liberia and Ethiopia remained unconquered by them The rest 10 million square miles with 110 million bewildered new subjects had been carved up by five European powers and one extraordinary individual in the name of Commerce Christianity Civilization and Conquest The Scramble for Africa is the first full scale study of that extraordinary episode in history
